

MANY THRILLS IN PARTY FOR MEMBERS OF Y

Ward and spooky happenings are expected in the dimly lighted halls of the Rock Island Y. M. C. A.

When ghosts and goblins hold sway at that place next Tuesday evening. Thrills, violent enough to throw a shock into the coldest of the denizens of the supernatural are being prepared. Mystery shrouds the preparations, but the formulas of the events are well known to be individual acts at putting over affairs such as the big Y Halloween party.

There will be a ghost walk, to the strains of ethereal music, when the guests will be ushered through dark and mysterious ways, where weird sights and sounds will fill the vision and hearing. In fact, if the plans are carried out as successfully as they are expected to, the party will be an event of the most timely and most conducive to fun.

All members of the Y. M. C. A. are invited, with their friends, and the ladies are expected to be present in equally great numbers, since the Y. W. C. A. is cooperating in the affair and has a part in the program. The dormitory men and the regular members are expected to make a big showing, both on the program and in the rest of the festivity. At 7:30 the proceedings commence, to last until 10 o'clock. The general social work committee, supervising the affair, is headed by Lynn Ewing, and the rest of the members are E. O. Valle, Jr., C. E. Clindinin, D. B. Bergquist, Ray Walker, and L. Hadaway. The special Halloween committee is composed of Marlowe Hawkins, R. M. Flick, C. R. Nelson, Ben Clark, E. A. Nitsche, Leroy Soady, John C. Kirley, R. P. Brennan, Charles Bleuer, and Irving Wright, who are caring for the details.

Store Editorials

Marking the Goods
at the Right Prices.

By our system of arriving at the RIGHT price to mark goods, we eliminate every element of guesswork, or eye-valuation.

There is no such thing as experiment or over-pricing. We know what it costs to sell goods—the exact percentage—this we must have, plus a small profit. There is no such thing as holding up a garment and by looking it over guess what it should bring.

The incentive for a buyer to select the best possible garment to sell at a given price is the satisfaction of having them all sell out at that price.

However, if, in his selection, his judgment was poor and they did not sell readily at the price for which they were bought to sell, he would mark them at the next lower scheduled selling price—which would mean a loss to the concern.

A buyer having many such mark-downs would be severely criticized and if he continued to buy carelessly his carelessness would result in the employment of a better buyer.

This scientific method of marking the goods at the right prices in the first place, means simply this: There is no guesswork. We must understand our business. Customers may purchase with confidence early in the season. The prices are right from the beginning.

This is a part of our service—to let the customer benefit.
